

Killing of animals
Instruments for moral analysis
2001

Most of the people eat meat. Alive animals must be killed, shot down, slaughtered, sacrificed, to produce this food. Choosing among these verbs may be described common points of view. The aim of this book is to represent the main moralistic approach of civil society. The result of this round table is to give a common denominator among the instances and not an answer to the problem. The way is to harmonize these general approaches, allowing the reader to have a better knowledge of the investigated subject.
